there were four arsenals near Chungking: One at Tatuk'ou (大度口), thirty li south of Chungking; two at Ts'uch'ikou (磁器口), a suburb of Chungking; and one at Liaochiat'ai (磨家台), fifteen li north of Chungking. Most of the skilled workers in these arsenals were recruited from the Hanyang and Mukden arsenals. These four factories can produce firearms of various calibers, shells, heavy and light machine guns, Czech and Chungcheng type rifles and imitations of American tommy guns and carbines. Chungking is the main source for the supply of firearms and munitions to the South China Military Area and to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.
